What Is Express Written Consent?

Express written consent is a written agreement that is authorized by the recipient of the text marketing messages.

It should include a clear and visible disclosure that explains to the consumer that they are authorizing a company to send them marketing communications via text message.

Under the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA), consumers must agree to receive SMS marketing messages from your company before you can send them.

You must also explain why you are sending the messages, what messages they can expect from you, and provide the terms and conditions and privacy policy for your marketing program.

Written does not mean that the consent has to be handwritten.

Instead, it simply refers to any type of permission that a business can document and keep on file, such as a text message reply or entry form submission.

Why Do I Need Express Written Consent to Run a Text Sweepstakes?

If you plan to run a text sweepstakes, you need to obtain express written consent before sending any marketing messages to participants. This is federal law.

Express written consent is a part of the telecommunications regulations set forth by the TCPA. The TCPA is responsible for regulating how companies conduct SMS marketing in order to protect consumers from unwanted communications.

The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) is responsible for enforcing the TCPA. As a result, express written consent is required by federal law.

Businesses can face hefty penalties for failing to abide by this law including per message fines and willful violation fines. There is no cap on the damages that a company can face for sending text messages illegally.

How to Get Express Written Consent for a Text to Win?

Fortunately, it's possible to get express written consent from consumers electronically. All you need to do is create an opt-in message for your campaign with the information as required per the TCPA.

By Text Message

An SMS marketing or sweepstakes company can assist you with creating TCPA-compliant mobile entry pages for your promotion.

As far as the opt-in message, it needs to include all of the following:

- The purpose of your campaign (to run a text sweepstakes)
- Message frequency
- Message and data rates may apply
- Link to your Official Rules (terms and conditions)
- Link to Your Privacy Policy

Don't forget to explain how they can:

1. opt-out by texting 'STOP'
2. get help by texting 'HELP'

This will ensure that participants have all of the information they need to engage with your campaign.

By Web Entry Form

If a participant decides to enter your text to win via the web entry form instead of by text, you can also add the opt-in SMS message to your web entry form.

Then you will also obtain express written consent to send these participants text messages.

Use Double Opt-in to Confirm Express Written Consent for SMS Marketing

Express written consent is an important part of SMS compliance that could create a lot of headaches for your business if not done properly.

As a result, we recommend that you always use double opt-in if you obtain express written consent to send SMS marketing messages to a phone number via another channel, such as web entry form.

The TCPA requires that you send your text subscribers a message to confirm that they've opted-in to your SMS marketing program. This message should repeat the details of your SMS promotion that were stated at the time of opt-in.

You can simply ask participants to reply 'YES' if they agree to receive SMS messages to provide a double opt-in

By using double opt-in, you'll be able to confirm that the participant indeed has access to the phone number they entered during the sign up process.

You'll also remind your subscribers that they did in fact give you permission to send them text messages.

This will help to reduce your SMS unsubscribe rate and the chances of your marketing text messages being blocked as spam.

Express Written Consent and TCPA Frequently Asked Questions

Here are FAQ and answers about TCPA and SMS marketing:

If a Customer Already Gave Me Their Phone Number Can I Send Them Text Messages?

No, you have not specifically asked them to authorize your company sending them text messages. As a result, you will still need to obtain express written consent.

Does TCPA Require Opt-Out?

TCPA does not require express consent or opt-out instructions.

Are Any Text Messages Exempted From TCPA?

TCPA applies to SMS marketing and advertising messages, autodialed and pre-recorded phone calls. However, some text messages are exempted from TCPA and do not require express written consent:

- Non-commercial messages
- Urgent or emergency updates

However, all marketing messages that are designed to sell or promote a product or service must follow TCPA rules.

As a result, all SMS related to text sweepstakes must follow TCPA regulations and require companies to obtain express written consent before sending any text messages.
